About Us

The Art and Culture Center / Hollywood serves as a cultural landmark for both its contemporary visual arts programming and for the distinctive character of the Kagey Home structure. This beautiful example of Mediterranean Revival architecture was built in 1924 by the home's founding family, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kagey. Built for an estimated cost of $16,000, it is one of Hollywood's first show place homes and was completed a year before the City of Hollywood was incorporated. Many of the home's original features from the 1920s have been retained, such as the glass doorknobs, wrought-iron railings, tiles on the second-floor balcony, wood moldings and floors, and arches.

In January 1990, the property was purchased by the City of Hollywood to become the new home of the Art and Culture Center / Hollywood. Each year, the Center presents more than a dozen originally curated contemporary exhibitions in the Kagey site, presenting "new art in an old building."
